Description

This “life” project matches its owner’s desire to include this project in a sustainable tourism approach, as much as possible: blending the building in with its surroundings (location, orientation, reversibility of construction), well-considered choice of materials (wooden construction), choice of contemporary forward-looking architecture whilst using small built heritage (wooden shingles), priority given to occupants’ health and well-being, rational use of power and water, owners’ desire to share their passion for nature with their guests, raising of gîte occupants’ awareness of the environment and energy alternatives, etc. The gîtes received Marque Parc accreditation in October 2014.
