

Chaux Mourant Forest

Arcade Haut-Jura

Roche Devant (Gérard Gerbod)

Opposite the Risoux mountain, on the sunbathed hillside of the Bellefontaine combe, stretches the Chaux Mourant forest. From the viewpoint on the Roche Devant, its rocky, dry and illuminated ridge can be fully appreciated.

In a bucolic environment, this trail will take you on a journey through forests, combes and clearings. Along this charming mountain trail, you will walk in the footsteps of the "gabelous" before discovering the Roche Devant belvedere and its view over the vast pastures that punctuate the thick tapestry of coniferous trees.

*"Gabelous" was the name used to refer to customs officers by smugglers who once traded with Switzerland in their own unique way.

Bellefontaine (A)

The story behind this village's name dates back to the 1630s. At the time, the Franche-Comté region was still independent and was victim of the ravage caused by the passing of German and French hordes. Inhabitants from nearby villages therefore took to travelling up to this hilltop village in search of uncontaminated water sources. Belle-fontaine was thus named to mean "bonne fontaine" (good fountain), "bonne eau" (good water).

Viewpoint from Roche Devant (B)

"The Roche Devant belvedere offers an almost southern atmosphere with its rocky outcrops, dry grasslands and prolonged exposure to sunlight... From it, visitors are offered a view over the plateau and the forest of Risoux just opposite, as well as a horizontal view of the valley of Bellefontaine extending from the village to the Morez wind gap, passing through the gorges of l'Évalude. The mosaic of meadows and wooded areas that makes up the valley appears to be progressively swallowed up by the forest rolling down the Risoux. This impression is particularly noticeable south of the village of Bellefontaine." F. Wattellier

“Located on the rounded top of one of the small hills formed by morainic deposits, the statue of the Virgin Mary overlooks the wave of grasslands and forests rolling down towards the Morez wind gap, to the south-west. Here, visitors can get up-close and personal with this agricultural landscape, surrounded by pastures and trees”. F. Wattellier
